PUBLIC SERVICE IS A GOOD THING. POLITICS CAN BE TOO.

The Georgetown Institute of Politics and Public Service at the McCourt School of Public Policy connects students and public servants to figure out how. Open to the entire university community, GU Politics brings top figures from politics, government, and media to the Hilltop with one goal in mind: to inspire young people to get involved in politics as a form of public service.

FELLOWS PROGRAM

The GU Politics Fellows Program connects students with political leaders to learn from one another on how to improve our politics. Each semester, top names in politics, government, and media immerse themselves in campus life, lead a weekly non-credit discussion group on a pressing political topic, hold office hours for students to discuss their career path or the political news of the day, and work with a "Student Strategy Team" to come up with practical solutions to political problems.

* Visiting Fellows are prominent public servants and political practitioners who spend a shorter or more condensed period of time on campus engaging with the Georgetown community. Like Regular Fellows, they hold discussion groups, host office hours, work with Student Strategy Teams and participate in bigger events during their shorter stay on campus. Stay tuned for more details on events and discussion groups with Fall 2017 Visiting Fellow Jose Diaz-Balart.

Understanding that no single institution can confront our global challenges alone, the Baker Center for Leadership & Governance was founded to convene key stakeholders to reimagine solutions to pressing issues, and begin the important work of restoring faith in our institutions. The Baker Center challenges new and creative ideas and seeks to cultivate the next generation of leaders.

In our second year, more than 160 students took on leadership roles at GU Politics — from our Student Advisory Board, to our Student Strategy Teams, to our Special Ops Team. And there are even more opportunities for you to get involved this year. So come work with us. Visit politics.georgetown.edu to learn more!
